THAILAND – SCHOOLS PROJECT 'WATER FOR KIDS'

The SkyJuice Foundation teamed up with the Adventist Development and Relief Agency (ADRA) Australia in 2003 to provide a number of water treatment plants to schools in rural Thailand that did not have access to safe clean drinking water. The programs were administered by ADRA to three schools in Ubon Ratchatani Province of Thailand.

The beneficiaries of the project not only include the immediate children, but also the wider families and community in the village. The program included the construction of secure wells, structures for the head tank feed supply to the system as well as treated water storage. One of the immediate and significant impacts of the program was that children expressed 'relief and happiness' of not having to continually travel long distances to fetch water and women could spend more time with their families. It was also reported to ADRA that the children were enjoying improved health and attendance at school had increased.
